discussed about Challenges and Solutions of ICT

- Data Collection and Surveillance: Social media platforms and online services often collect vast amounts of personal data, which can be misused or fall into the wrong hands.
- Lack of Transparency: Users are frequently unaware of how their data is being used, shared, or sold, raising concerns about privacy violations.
- Reduced Face-to-Face Interaction: Increased reliance on digital communication can lead to reduced physical social interactions, contributing to feelings of loneliness and social isolation.
- Virtual Relationships: Online interactions may lack the depth and emotional connection of face-to-face relationships.

In the end session concluded that while ICT presents significant opportunities for enhancing social life, it is essential to address the associated challenges proactively. By fostering digital literacy, ensuring inclusivity, protecting privacy, and promoting ethical online behavior, we can harness the full potential of ICT to create more connected, informed, and engaged communities.

Outcome

1. The session on “Benefits of ICT in E-Social Life” successfully achieved its objectives, leading to several impactful outcomes.
2. It enhanced understanding, practical skills, and strategic initiatives that participants can now apply in their personal and professional lives.
3. Participants learned to recognize and critically evaluate misinformation and fake news online, promoting a more informed and discerning digital society.
4. Participants gained insights into future ICT trends, such as artificial intelligence, virtual/augmented reality, and 5G technologies, and their potential impact on social interactions.
